

Mark Larson

Mark Larson is Executive Vice President of Bank of Nevada, in charge of managing the northwest office, overseeing customer accounts, and developing new business. Mr. Larson also sits on the executive committee of the bank. Mr. Larson joined Bank of Nevada in 1998, when it was known as Bank West of Nevada. Previously, he worked for seven years for U.S. Bank, where he became Vice President and Regional Manager. He has also worked for First National Bank, now known as Wells Fargo. Mr. Larson holds an associate's in business management from Stevens Henagar College in Salt Lake City and graduated from Pacific Coast Banking School, a graduate program offered in partnership with the University of Washington.